The edition of 1000 copies for the initial number was increased to 2000 and 3,000 in succeeding issues. With the third number the subscription was raised to 50 cents, and at the end of the volume it was stated that the supply was very limited at $1.00 a set. The circulation was largely in the medical profession and among ornithologists. Vol. II, Nos. 1-12, Feb., 1888-Jan., 1889, pp. vi+264.

Though the name of the editor does not appear, it is understood that George Bird Grinnell, president pro temore of the Audubon Society, organized February, 1886, had general supervision, with Charles F. Emory, general secretary. Unfortunately this philanthropic movement proved abortive, possibly owing to its connection with a paper devoted to the hunting of game. Each number contains an uncolored and reduced plate after Audubon. The text includes a number of original articles. Biographies of Audubon and Wilson, the latter by Helen V. Austin, and signed papers by J. A. Allen, Geo. Bird Grinnell, Robert Ridgway, G. B. Sennett, and R. W. Shufeldt. Florence A. Merriam's "Hints to Audubon Workers" ran through eleven numbers.

Continued as "BIRDS AND ALL NATURE." Popular and juvenile biographies, mostly unsigned, C. C. and E. K. Marble contributing. The figures of mounted birds from the collections of the Chi. Acad. Science and F. M. Woodruff, are by the three color process. The publishers announced that they had reprinted 10 editions of 5,000 each of some of the numbers.

Vol. XIV, Nos. 1-5, June-Dec., 1903, pp. (i-ii) title, 1-236 text, 237-238 index, incl 36 col. pll., 24 being birds or nests.

Vols. VIII, XII, XIII, XV-XIX not examined. Suspended after Apr.-June number, 1906. This publication proved very well adapted to the use of the primary school. The colored figures of birds have little artistic merit, but they are, for the most part identifiable and offered remarkably cheap. A better grouping or arrangement of subject matter, would have greatly increased its usefulness.

Vol. II (1), Nos. 8-10 (7-9), June, July & Aug.-Dec., 1891, unpagd, 4 pp. to issue. I have not seen no. "9," it was probably published about Oct. These numbers were issued by C. W. Hillman, Canisteo, N. Y. In No. "10," the editor and publisher states "For various reasons, we have decided to consolidate the Empire State Naturalist and the Bittern." The subtitle: "The Empire State Naturalist. A Monthly Magazine devoted to Natural History. Single Subs. $1.25." An excellent example of how not to publish a paper.

This appears to be the joker of the pack, yet this shabby little periodical of less than 4 by 6 inches, actually obtained second class rates! The covers are variously printed: "First edition," "Subscribers' edition" or "Sample copy edition." The notes are by J. R. B. (onsell), M. A. C(arriker), Albert Ganier, Barton Nugent, C. H.

Sleight and R. P. Smithwick.

Began as a 4 page, 2 column amateur local paper, printed one page at the time on a small hand press, with something like 300 subscribers, it was enlarged to 8 pages on November 1, 1890, by the addition of a colored cover. Beginning with Feb. 1, 1891, (vol. ii, no. 3) "The Notes on Colbert Co. (Alabama) Birds," by F. W. McCormack, continued until the final number, Jan. 2, 1892, from 2 to 5 pages to the issue, 67 pages in all, 156 species were enumerated and annotated. Through the courtesy of Mr. McCormack, I have been enabled to examine his file of this volume, No. 4 being in the original typewritten manuscript. After completing the second volume, the paper was discontinued until Feb. 2, 1894, to enable the editor to attend college, and volume III, number I, appeared as a six column folio weekly newspaper.

In April, 1898, the subscription was reduced to 50 cents, and single numbers to 5 cents. The publisher of this magazine was a dealer in natural history specimens. The paper was not supported by a large corps of ornithological writers, nevertheless it is ably edited and of greater value than perhaps, it would first appear. The contributors are R. M. Anderson, Emerson Atkins, G. M. Allen, B. Buckenham, C. Barlow, J. H. Bowles, Edw. J. Brown, J. J. Carroll, Adolph B. Covert, Nathan L. Davis, Frederick Davis, Arthur M. Farmer, C. P. Forge, W. S.

Vol. IV, Nos. 1-10?, Jan., 1889-Oct. ?, 1890, pp 1-64?, unpp.

January, 1890, this paper became the Official Organ of the Kansas City (Mo.) Academy of Science, and in October, it became the publisher and proprietor. It is possible that the volume ran to 12 numbers, since its successor did not begin before January, 1891. It is understood that the "Naturalist" was a continuation of the "Hoosier Naturalist." Contains few bird notes, and is of scarcely any value ornithologically.

85. THE NATURALISTS' LEISURE HOUR AND MONTHLY BULLETIN, A. E. FOOTE, (engraved title) SCIENCE AND PRACTICE, PHILADELPHIA, PA. No. 1223 BELMONT (4116 ELM) AVENUE. Monthly. 50 (75)c. a year (for 12 numbers). 8 vo.

Began January, 1887, by Dr. Foote, in an endeavor to build up a great retail depot of natural history supplies. The subscription was reduced to 25 cents during the fourth year, with a circulation of 7,000, and the 16 pages were doubled by the addition of a second half to each number. Two editions were then published, a subscribers' on heavy paper, and an advertising on light paper.

Ran into the 17th year, at least, the last I have seen is dated Jan., No. 140, 1893. While the press work can scarcely be commended, the contents is more or less interesting to the ornithologist, especially during the earlier volumes; later the extensive lists of scientific literature are its chief value.

Suspended, subscriptions filled by the "Popular Science Monthly." The place made vacant by the defunct "O. & O." was almost immediately filled by the "Nidiologist." In December, 1894, the subscription was increased to $1.50, and so remained the balance of the volume. From March, 1895, to April, 1896, it was published in New York City, following the criticism of Dr. Cones, the superfluous "i" was removed from the title, December, 1895, and marked the advent of a new cover design. Dr. Shufeldt became associated with the editor May, 1895, and severed his connections simultaneously with the withdrawal of the new, and the reappearance of the original cover design. With the beginning of third volume became Official Organ of the Cooper Ornithological Club.

Nos. 2 and 3 of the initial volume became exhausted before April, 1893, as much as $1.00 being offered for the former, sometime later the publisher offered two sets of Vol. I at $2.50. According to a circular letter appeal for financial aid, dated Dec. 12, 1896, the subscription list at no time exceeded 600.

Suspended. Although there were some changes in associate editorship, John H. Sage remained at the head of his department throughout the series, and the three or more pages to a number, of popular ornithology, made up of short articles by various writers, and short notes and comments by the editor, are well edited and authoritative. This periodical is wholly out of print.

August, 1887, Will M. Clemens bought all right and title, removed to San Diego, Cal. and continued the publication under his own editorship, Feb., 1888, C. R. Orcutt being the publisher, for one month, when the latter became both editor and publisher, and continued in the latter capacity after E. M. Haight of Riverside, became editor and proprietor, Oct., 1888 to Aug., 1889. Owing to the ill health of E. M. Haight this magazine changed hands again; B. MacDonald, Editor, A. MacDonald, Manager, and published by The Collector Publishing Company, San Francisco, J. A. Ephram, Printer. It ran only six numbers more before suspending, A. MacDonald publishing the last four numbers. The subscription was raised to 50 cents in Nos. 37, 38, 42-45; and 35 cents in 39-41. Volumes I, II and III were scarce at $5.00 a set in 1888, according to the advertisement. Began as a stamp paper, became more general with the sixth volume and later, until the final volume, which was almost exclusively given to philately. Interesting short papers on birds by R. L. Clutter, R. M. Gibbs, S. Estle Miller, H. A. Talbot, H. R. Taylor and Geo. F. Wittemore. Wm. L. Kells has a series of notes on the "Canadian Wild Birds."

Vol. V, Nos. 1-12, July, 1879-Feb., 1881, pp. iv-96 (suspended after Nov., 1879, until Aug., 1880, Oct.-Nov. numbers bound under one cover.) 3 ill.

This is the pioneer amateur oological periodical of America. S. L. Willard, a typical American boy of about sixteen years, after conducting an ornithological department in "The Repository," a western amateur paper, became convinced of the need of a serial devoted to birds and their eggs, and without help, no money and little experience, engaged the services of an unemployed printer, and began the publication of this little paper. The first two issues were not only typographical failures, printed with coarse type on thin paper with scant margin and the headings all set up in type, but the subject matter trite and of too manifold nature, needless to state it received severe criticism, and the discouraged editor at a loss to pay the printer, withdrew the publication. However, several inquiries for sample copies from surprisingly remote localities and one or two press notices, awakened a fresh determination to proceed. For the third number, he invested in a bit of engravers' box-wood and carved a heading, at the same time he added a small font of type, sufficient to compose a single page, and negotiated with a boy friend to print it on his press, one page at a time. Five numbers were issued in this way during spare hours from school, when his friend having disposed of his press, it became necessary to do the printing elsewhere. From his plans, a local blacksmith built a press with a capacity of just one page, on which the next four numbers were printed.

It must be remembered that the editor was under the necessity of composing the bulk of the reading matter, particularly in the early volumes before the paper had many contributors. Beside writing under his own name, he published his own compositions in the form of essays for the editorial pages, Under the non de plume of "Ovum" he published a series of papers entitled "Birds' Nests and Eggs," which ran for three years, having for its inspiration a similar series by J. A. Whitley in "Amateur Age." Considerable also appeared over the name of "Avis." Over fifty woodcuts during the series, most of them wholly the work of this enthusiast (except a few bearing the signature of S. Pryor, sculptor) very crude work of course but showing great industry. Volume II, and most of volume III were printed on a large amateur press he had purchased, and the balance up to the first four numbers of volume V, on a better and larger press which he also used for job printing. Beginning with the fourth volume, the periodical attained to the dignity of a cover and an engraved design which is best described in the words of the proud engraver: "In the foreground, across the lower corner of the cover, appear three eggs strung upon a straw. A pair of Hawks have chosen a delightful position for their nest in the tree near the shore of the lake; the motherly Duck has nested early and is leading her little family into the reeds; the Egret and Sandpipers are indispensable adjuncts to pleasure upon water; the Ruffed Grouse are both drumming; the Bubo virginianus knows very little about any Snowy Owl; a bird of prey, probably an Eagle, appears just over the horizon, a number of graceful Swallows skim through the air, and the Downy Woodpecker has found something upon the tree that seems to engage its attention."

On January, 1876, the subscription was reduced to 40 cents, and raised to 60 cents at the beginning of volume IV. With the November, 1879, issue, Jos. M. Wade undertook its publication, S. L. Willard becoming assistant editor, and the last eight numbers were issued from the office of a regular printer, with Rockville, Conn., as the place of publication. The five volumes required just six years to publish. This little magazine, though often quoted, is quite scarce. I know of only two or three complete sets in existence, one set collected recently, after much personal energy, advertising and correspondence, represented an outlay of almost $50 in cash. The first three volumes are, of course, the scarcest: worth from $10 to $15 each. The privilege of examining a complete file I owe to Mr. R. M. Barnes.

Probably the bulk of the contributions should be accredited to the editors. Among the most prominent or prolific are: W. T. Allen, Dr. H. A. Atkins, W. H. Ballou, T. M. Brewer, G. A. Boardman, A. W. Butler, C. E. Cole, W. H. Collins, A. Covart, W. Couper, F. J. Davis, D. H. Eaton, M. B. Griffing, C. W. Gunn, E. S. Hasbronck, H. Hale, M. Hardy, D. Hatch, C. A. Hawes, A. Herbert, J. Holzaphel, J. S. Howland, E. Ingersoll, C. L. Rawson (the famous "J(ennie) M(ay) W(hipple)" until uncovered by J. P. Norris), J. T. Jones, F. T. Jencks, F. H. L(attin), C. J. Maynard, H. M(errell), C. A. Morse, W. H. Nash, B. J. Peckham, G. H. Ragsdale, J. H. Severance, J. H. Smith, F. A. S(ampson), D. D. Stone, V. M. Firor, H. G. Vennor, C. W. Stromburg, W. T. Warrick, E. E. W(intle) and W. Wood. With Volume VI, the publication became known as the "Ornithologist and Oologist."

Vol. IV, Nos. 1-9, Jan., 1897-Jan., 1898, pp. 68.

"Guaranteed circulation 3000." This magazine had quite a checkered career. With the December, 1894, number, it was consolidated with "The Naturalist" of Austin, Texas, and that issue and vol. 2, no. 1, only appeared under the latter title; the subscription was advanced to 50 cents, February, 1895, A. B. Averill became editor, and in March it announced that the North-Western Ornithological Association had made it the official organ; Dr. C. C. Purdum became associated with the editor, which he retained until it again changed hands November, 1896, to John Martin, Palestine, Oregon, and the subscription lowered to 25 cents, and the Avocet engraving was replaced by the seal of the State of Oregon for the first four numbers of the last volume. Suspended.

Among the contributors are A. B. Averill, Fred. H. Andros, H. T. Bohnman, Geo. F. Breninger, D. A. Cohen, W. W. Cooke, W. Edwards, E. F. Hadley, C. B. Hadley, Wm. L. Kells, C. F. Pflinger, A. L. Pope, R. P. Smithwick, Ray Stryker and R. W. Williams, Jr.

Probably complete. The "Naturalists' Companion," Feb., 1886, stated this publication had suspended. Wm. L. Kells wrote a serial on "Canadian Wild Birds," and C. L. McCollum on "Wisconsin Birds," also papers by C. H. Andros, L. Hayter, Charles H. Marsh and A. M. Shields.

Vol. I, Nos. 1-XII, Jan. 1-Dec. 1, 1891, pp. 96 and covers.

Vol. II, Nos. 1, 2, 6, Jan., Feb., July 1, 1892, pp. 1-15, and 25-32, (no. 2 without cover). The pagination would seem to indicate an issue between nos.

2 and 6, probably a no. 3 for June, but no more according to my information.

With the fourth number, Willard N. Clute became editor, and the price was increased to 35 cents. At the end of the year 300 copies of the title and index were printed, indicating about the circulation at this time. It was then transferred to Letson Balliet and William S. Sanford, Des Moines, Iowa, and they became the editors and publishers, raising the subscription to 50 cents. The periodical speedily degenerated under the new management. Extravagant claims were made in respect to the circulation. After publishing a single number, the price was advanced to $1.00 a year, 10 cents a copy, and William S. Sanford & Co. editors and publishers; and the final issue with the Ornithologist and Botanist Publishing Co., just previous to the transfer to the "California Traveler and Naturalist." Contributors: B. S. Bowdish, H. C. Campbell, W. N. Clute, Edward Fuller, W. L. Kells, R. H. Lawrence, J. B. Lewis, H. E. Miller, A. H. Norton, E. B. Peck, N. F. Posson, W. S. Strode, J. M. S. L. Willard retired at the close of volume VI, and with volume IX Frank B. Webster became publisher, and M. Eaton (Cliff assumed the editorship as a successor to Jos. M. Wade. Volume XI, Frederic H. Carpenter, Rehoboth, Mass., became editor, with J. Parker Norris as Oological editor, and Wright & Bates, Entomological editors; Carpenter retired May, 1887, and Wright & Bates, the professional entomologists, July of the same year, when it was published by the Bristol Ornithological Club until the end of volume XII, after which Frank B. Webster resumed control editorially, with J. Parker Norris, Philadelphia, and Frank A. Bates. The last two volumes published by the Frank Blake Webster Company, and after no. 1, 1892, Frank A. Bates, name does not appear.

Volume XVII, the long familiar engraving of the Screech Owl on the permanent title page gives place to that of an Osprey scene, one of the same appearing on the cover since December, 1882, drawn by Edwin Sheppard of Philadelphia. The "O. & O." boasted a large and most loyal clientelage, both amateur and the trade, a list of whom would include the majority of the field collectors of the period. The deterioration began more than a year previous to the final issue of the triple number. A limited edition only of Vol. VI was printed and it was soon out of print, VII and VIII sells for $5, X-$2.50, XI-$2.00, and XVII-$1.50.

A few copies of a suppressed sheet (Vol VIII, No. 11, Nov., 1883, pp. 83-84) entitled "Plain English," being an editorial of caustic comment on the personnel of the Nuttall Ornithological Club and the newly organized American Ornithologists' Union; recently procured from the personal effects of the late Jos. M. Wade, have been put in circulation at 50 cents per copy by the Franklin Bookshop of Philadelphia.

THE OSPREY AN ILLUSTRATED MONTHLY MAGAZINE OF BIRDS & NATURE (contents) Complete Series, Volume VI, THE OSPREY COMPANY, WASHINGTON, D. C. (cover form of Volume I, New Series, 1902.) Super-royal 8 vo.

Vol. I, (new series), Nos. 1-7, Jan.-July, 1902, pp. 108+42 (suppl.)&15 pll. (Suspended after No. 6, No. 7 not placed in general circulation.)

The first two numbers edited by Walter A. Johnson and Dr. A. C. Murchison, the California department by Donald A. Cohen, the latter in place of Chester Barlow as originally announced in the April prospectus; and this periodical also published the proceedings of the Michigan Ornithological Club. After the second number edited by Walter A. Johnson alone until Dr. Coues became associated with him March, 1897, and the place of publication removed to 141 East 25th St., New York City. At the instance of Dr. Coues, it was purchased by Dr. Theodore Gill, and removed to Washington, D. C. October, 1899, and the latter two gentlemen became the editors, with Walter A. Johnson, associate, and Louis Agassiz Fuertes art editor. Dr. Gill, who had withdrawn from the April and May numbers, again assumed the editorship by June, upon the retirement of Dr. Coues.

Vol. V, No. 2, the editors were Dr. Theodore Gill in collaboration with Robert Ridgway, Leonard Stejneger, Frederic A. Lucas, Charles W. Richmond, Paul Bartsch, William Palmer and Harry C. Oberholser, of Washington, and Witmer Stone of Philadelphia. The only change made in the new series was the elevation of Paul Bartsch to chief editorship with Dr. Gill.

Among the special features "William Swainson and His Times," "The Osprey or Pishhawk: Its Characteristics and Habits," and as a supplement to the final volume: "General History of Birds," all by Dr. Gill. This by far the most brilliant of the minor ornithological periodicals, in all that goes to make a success, was nevertheless a failure. Volume I is very scarce and worth about $6.00.

Nehrling most frequently appear, and the illustrations are mostly from photos of mounted specimens in the Childs' collection. The second or scientific series is almost wholly devoted to original accounts of the nesting of extremely rare species with illustrations reproduced from photographs. Vol. XVIII, Nos. 134-139, Aug., Sept., 1911, May, 1912, Dec., 1913, Jan., Feb., 1914, 92 columns.

The original title was: The West-American Scientist, but the hyphen was discarded after the fifth, and a cover assumed by the seventh number. With the exception of volume six, 1889, which was published by Samuel Carson & Co., San Francisco, C. R. Orcutt was both editor and publisher. No title page and index appears with the succeeding volumes. In completing a file, one discovers a number of typographical errors in dating and enumeration, not all numbers have covers, and the stock is apt to be inferior. Enumeration of volumes ten and eleven may appear intricate; of the former, from the last half of number 93, to 100, there is nothing to distinguish the number or date of publication unless the separate sheets happen to be placed in covers; sometimes, lacking the first 41 pages of the full volume, it may be found inclosed in a cover entitled: "Botany of Southern California," a reference work by Charles Russell Orcutt. Numbers 84, 87 and 89 of volume XI are entitled: West American Scientist.

This irregularly appearing little journal has outlived the great majority, and is a monument to the industry and perseverance of Proprietor C. R. Orcutt, the editor and chief contributor along botanical lines. I am uninformed in respect to the circulation, but there are a number of life subscribers, and it will doubtless be continued by the publishers. Many of the early issues are exceedingly scarce. The ornithological notes appeared in the early volumes, and are by L. Belding, F. E. Blaisdell, F. L. Burns, Chette L. Cheney, S. H. Henry, Theo. D. Hurd, J. Warren Jacobs, Louis R. Lighton, R. E. Ranchford & Son, H. R. Sharples, Frank Stephens, G. D. Story and H. R. Taylor.
